

Atlanta's Sim Doughtie Wins CORFAC International's Olen Monsees Award

From left, Sim Doughtie, principal of Atlanta-based King Industrial/CORFAC International, and John Homsher, president of CORFAC International

CHICAGO — CORFAC International 2016 President John Homsher announced its annual awards for the association's greatest contributors for the year at its recent fall summit held in Toronto. Atlanta's Sim Doughtie, principal with King Industrial/CORFAC International, was awarded the Olen Monsees Award for "Long-Time Service to the Commercial Real Estate Network."

"I am extremely honored to be the 2016 recipient of the Olen Monsees Award, not only because CORFAC International has deemed me worthy of such a prestigious award, but also because Olen Monsees was a true professional, a wonderful gentleman and a dear friend of mine for many years," said Doughtie. "As I have done in the past, I will continue to work toward the success of the organization, and for what's in the best interest of CORFAC International and all of its members."

The Olen Monsees Award was created in memory of Monsees, who was president of Karbank Real Estate Co. in Kansas City, Mo., and a CORFAC colleague for many years.

Doughtie has been a CORFAC member for 24 years. He chaired the Conference Committee for three years, participates in all of the key committees including Transactions, Communications, Affiliation Development and Professional Development, and attends the association's two annual conferences in the spring and fall. He is also known as one of the top industrial real estate brokers in metropolitan Atlanta.

Founded in 1989, CORFAC firms completed more than 11,000 lease and sales transactions in 2015 totaling 500 million square feet of space valued in excess of $8.5 billion.